HELPING CHILDREN HEAL
AND CONNECT THROUGH THE POWER OF TOUCH

Tui Na is a Chinese massage

that is over two thousand years old and this therapeutic approach is based on the theory of Traditional Chinese Medicine.

Studies on related touch therapies have confirmed it has potential for treating symptoms of Autism, although it does not claim to be a cure.

Many parents who have attended the training have implemented the regular daily massage at home and have reported improvements in sleep, social skills, stress levels, outbursts, speech, repetitive behavior, sensory and digestive problems.

In addition, practicing this massage daily can further strengthen the special bond that parents have with their child. Therefore, by reducing parental stress well-being is improved all around.

As Tui Na massage is holistic with no reported negative side effects it can be used effectively in combination with conventional autism support strategies and behavioral and other therapies.

"Our mission is to help as many parents and caregivers to learn this safe holistic therapy, which we believe will greatly benefit their child and have a positive impact on family life..."

«I attended the training course with Leonid and Sanja on Saturday and it was a great day of training. They are 2 very genuine people who really do want the best for our kids and have a great way of teaching.

The best thing is that they truly understand all the difficulties that parents of children with autism are faced with.

We came away with the DVD to show everything we learnt on the day which will be a godsend when you forget some of the steps.

Thoroughly recommend training with these 2 wonderful people if you get a chance book yourself on their next training day!!»
